

Insights from SELDI's Corruption Monitoring System 2021

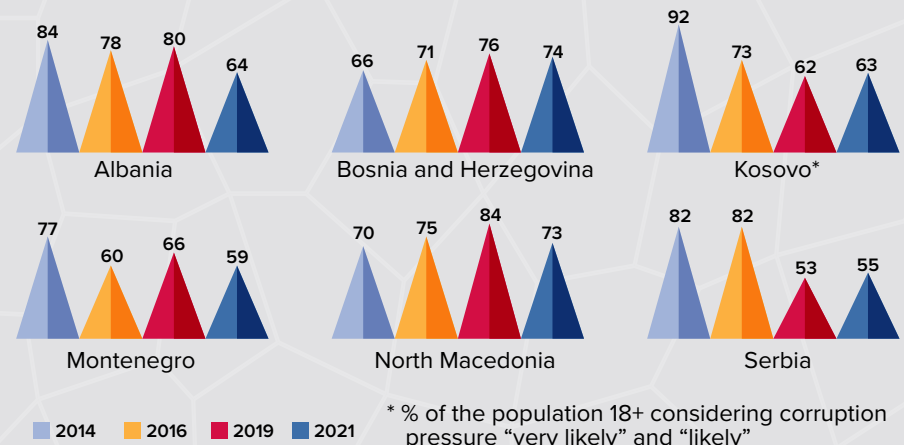

REVERSE in the anti-corruption progress

The anti-corruption progress achieved in the Western Balkans between the early 2000s and mid-2010s has now been reversed with most measures of administrative corruption indicating an increase. Self-reported involvement in corruption in the Western Balkans remains very high - 20-40% of the citizens admit to having paid some kind of a bribe.

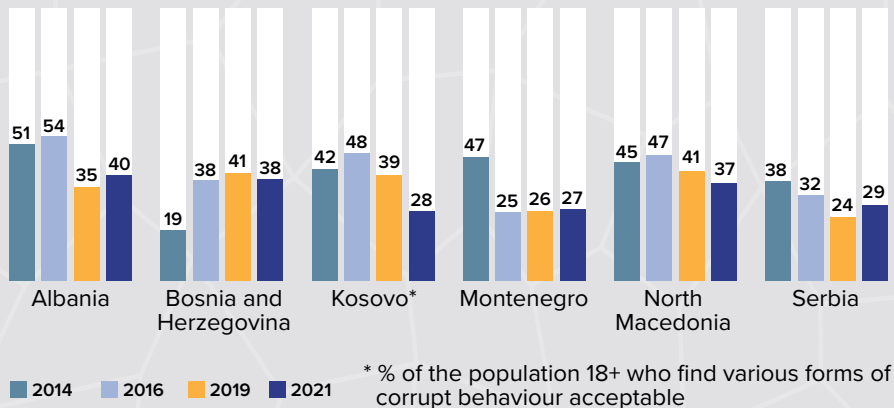

WORRYING LEVELS of corruption pressure from public officials

LIKELIHOOD of corruption pressure

ACCEPTABILITY of corruption

FEASIBILITY of policy responses of corruption

